AMP Capital grows global listed infrastructure team

AMP Capital Investors continues to build its global listed infrastructure investment team, with the appointment of Charles Hamieh to the new role of Senior Analyst Global Infrastructure Securities.

Mr Hamieh will focus on Australian and Asian infrastructure companies and will be based in Sydney.

His appointment coincides with AMP Capital's decision to launch a new fund later this year, the AMP Capital Global Infrastructure Securities Fund.

AMP Capital Investors Global Portfolio Manager Craig Noble said Mr Hamieh brings with him more than 12 years experience in the infrastructure arena.

"Charles is a great addition to our team and we are excited to have him on board as part of AMP Capital's growing global infrastructure securities capability," Mr Noble said.

"As markets and companies differ around the world, it is important to have local teams on the ground in local markets to discover compelling investment opportunities for investors.

"Charles will focus on the Australian and Asian markets as we look to launch the new AMP Capital Global Infrastructure Securities Fund to investors later this year.

"The fund will offer investors exposure to the entire infrastructure spectrum including inflation hedge assets such as electricity transmission and distribution through to the growth industries of airports and satellite communications."

Mr Hamieh brings more than 12 years of experience in infrastructure, including over six years in listed infrastructure and utility securities with AMP Capital, and most recently as Director of Infrastructure Securities at Hastings. Prior to that he was Fund Manager of the Global Infrastructure Fund at Challenger.

Mr Hamieh started with AMP Capital on Tuesday 6 April 2010 and reports to AMP Capital Global Portfolio Manager Craig Noble, who is based in Chicago.
